

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

INTRODUCTION.

IN the ancient cathedral and monastic churches of England, the Martyrology was read daily in the chapter house after prime.<sup>1</sup> For this reading every large church was provided with a book known as the Martyrologium, which contained not only the brief notices of saints and martyrs which were read on the day preceding their celebration and gave the name to the book, but also the records of the obits of the members of the chapter and of their benefactors, together with memoranda of various kinds.

Several of these books are still in existence. Of the Martyrologium of Christ Church, Canterbury, two copies have come down to us. The earlier, which is in the British Museum (Arundel MS., 68), is a thirteenth century MS. When this had become antiquated, an illuminated copy was made at the beginning of the sixteenth century, which is preserved in the Library of Lambeth Palace (Lambeth MS., 20). This is a large folio, still in its original leather binding, protected by plates and corner-pieces of latten. Both of these books contain an Obituarium as well as the Martyrology.

Another complete Martyrologium is that which belonged to the Brigettine monastery of Syon in Middlesex (British Museum, Add. MS., 22, 285), which will be more fully described below.

Occasionally the Martyrologium is included in the Breviarium, of which a fine example may be seen in the British Museum (Harleian MS., 2785).

These Martyrologia were adapted solely to the purposes of the particular church in which they were used. Even the Martyrology proper has its variations, according to the locality in which the book was to be used. They all exhibit variations and local additions which are often sufficient by themselves to indicate the church for the use of which the book was written.

Probably these variations may be sufficient to explain the reason why the Martyrologium is not found amongst the service-books printed for use in England. It may also be added that only one copy of the book was actually required in each church for the use of the reader.<sup>1</sup>

But though the Martyrologium was not printed for liturgical use, there is an interesting English version of it made for private use by Richard Whytford, a brother of Syon monastery, and printed by Wynkyn de Worde, as a small quarto, in 1526. Of this book about seven copies are known to be in existence, of which some are imperfect.

A reprint of this rare book is now offered to members of the Henry Bradshaw Society. Its title is:—

The Martiloge in englysshe after the use of the chirche of salisbury/ and as it is redde in Syon/ with addicydons.

This English version was made, as the translator tells us in his preface, “for the edificacyon of certayn religyous persones vnlerned/ that dayly dyd rede the same martiloge in latyn/ not vnderstandyng what they redde.” Thus the motive which led to the production of this work was the same as that which gave to the same monastery The Myroure of Oure Lady<sup>1</sup> in the prologue of which the translator, addressing the "daughters of Syon," says:—"forasmuche as many of you, though ye can synge and rede, yet ye can not se what the meanyng therof ys. . . . I haue drawen youre legende and all youre servyce in to Englyshe, that ye shoulde se by the vnderstondyng therof, how worthy and holy praysynge of oure gloryouse Lady is contente therin, and the more deuoutely and knowyngly synge yt and rede yt, and say yt to her worship."

<sup>1</sup> There is some uncertainty as to the custom of reading the Martyrology in parish churches. The Martyrologium is not among the books which parishioners were required to provide for their churches by the Constitutions of Archbishop Robert Winchelsey (Lyndewode's Provinciale, London, W. Bretton, 1505, fo. 137). The book is not always found in inventories of church goods, but it is found at Cherry Hinton, Trumpington, Histon, and elsewhere in Cambridgeshire, the book being sometimes a separate volume, or at other times bound up with the Processionale or Ordinale. (Churches of Cambridgeshire, pp. 9, 40, 60, 83, 104.)

The Rev. Christopher Wordsworth adds the following note:—

“The Martyrology did not appear in the list of seven books which an archdeacon of Sarum, in his charge, cir. 1485, required as ‘sufficient boks . . . whiche ye are bownde to have.’ See Fasti Sarisb. p. 131. Even in the account of the visitation of prebendal churches and their chapels by the Dean of Sarum in 1220–24 no mention is made of any martyrology either produced or required. A ‘martyrologium’ was one of the eight or nine books with which Bede had counselled the young priest to furnish himself before his ordination (De remedii peccatorum cap. i, quoted by Maskell Mon. Rit., 2nd ed., 1882, Vol. I. p. xv). But I have not come across any instance of its purchase being made compulsory by authority.”

Towards the end of the sixteenth century the Roman Martyrology was translated into Spanish with similar motives by the Jesuit Father Dionysio Vasquez,<sup>2</sup> who in his prologue states that it was made to meet the wants of those brethren (hermanos) of the Company of Jesus who were ignorant of Latin, with the hope that it might be useful also to others, who might be desirous to read "in a language so spread over the whole world [en una lengua tan esparzida por todo el mundo] a book so holy and profitable, which kindles our devotion by living examples, animates our weakness, warms our coolness, and consoles those distressed and tried by temptations and trials when they see the noble spirit of the glorious martyrs." It is added that no tables of the epacts and moons are given, because the book was for private use, and not for the services of the choir [porque no hauiendo de seruir esto libro en Româce para los coros en que se dizan los horas: no lo juzgamos necesario]. The same omission will be noticed in our English Martiloge.

In the seventeenth century an English translation was made of the reformed Martyrologium Romanum, which the translator recommended for daily use "in every Catholick family," just as its Latin original was used in every religious community.<sup>1</sup> This Martyrologe is, of course, purely Roman; there are no English saints inserted in addition to those which have a place in the Martyrologium Romanum, and there is nothing to suggest that the translator had seen the Martiloge of Richard Whytford.

It is now necessary to return to the Martiloge of Richard Whytford, and to examine its claim to be regarded as “after the vse of the churche of Salysbury/ and as it is redde in Syon.”

To test the accuracy of this statement we naturally turn to the Latin Martyrologium used in Syon monastery, and now preserved in the British Museum (Add. MS., 22, 285). Some results of this comparison are given in the Notes in this volume, and it will be found that the Martiloge of Whytford (excluding the “addicyons”) is substantially a translation of that actually in use at Syon monastery.

There are, however, some variations which seem to show that the copy used by Richard Whytford was not the same as that which has come down to us. Many of the peculiarities of spelling in the Martiloge are also found in the Syon Latin Martyrologium<sup>2</sup> (which for convenience will be referred to as A.); but on <sup>1</sup> A copy before me has the title:—The Roman Martyrologe set forth by the command of Pope Gregory XIII., and reviewed by the Authority of Urban VIII. Translated out of Latin into English by G. K., of the Society of Iesvs. The second edition . . . Printed at S. Omers by Thomas Gevbels, 1667.

* Examples of peculiar spellings common to the Martiloge and A. :—

March 19. l. 5. at suretyke. apud sureticum A., for Surrentum.

Sept. 10. l. 14. Brydhestane. brydhestani A., for Frithestani.

Sept. 19. l. 5. pluteolane. pluteolana A., for Puteolana.

Oct. 1. l. 12. In the graūd port. in portu granda A., for: in portu Ganda.

On the other hand, the following examples seem to show that the translator had before him a text which differed in some respects from A. :—

Jan. 30. l. 3. Innowate. nouati A. Some MSS. of Usuard read Innotatus.

Feb. 8. l. 3. Coynt. Corinthe A. Cointha is the reading of most MSS. cf Usuard.

May 14. l. 3. two of the emperours sones. duo philippi imperatores A. It seems probable that the translator was led into this mistake by a text with the spelling: duo filippi imperatores. By a stretch of charity towards R. Whytford, we may further suppose his text to have been: duo filii imperatoris.

the other hand there are many cases in which the Martiloge has a reading which is more correct than A. It will also be noticed that many of the additions to A are not found in the Martiloge. For example, the two feasts of St. Osmund, his deposition on Dec. 4, and his translation on July 16 are not in the Martiloge, though they appear to have been added to A before 1526.

Again, the two feasts of St. Thomas of Canterbury are not in the Martiloge,<sup>1</sup> though they are both in A, having been erased in the time of Henry VIII., and reinserted in the time of Queen Mary, when for a short time the "daughters of Syon" returned to their old home, and brought back their Martyrologium with them.

We may then be satisfied that the Martiloge is for the most part a translation of that which was daily read at Syon; but the other claim of its being "after the vse of the chirche of salisbury" remains to be considered. There is a priori reason for supposing that the Martyrologium used at Syon would be after the use of Salisbury, because by the Constitutions of the Brigittine Order, the brothers were ordered to sing mass and office after the use of the diocese in which any house of the order might be situated.<sup>2</sup> The monastery of Syon was in the diocese of London, in which the old use of St. Paul's was displaced and Sarum use ordered for adoption by Bishop Clifford in 1414,<sup>3</sup> the year before Henry V. granted a charter to Syon monastery, and the King himself laid the foundation stone in the presence of that bishop. Thus the Martyrologium used at Syon was doubtless regarded as being after the use of Salisbury, and the two

May 27. l. 4. adartens. atrebateni A. Other MSS. read adartensi.

Nov. 19. l. 5. Crispyne. Cipriani A. Crispini is the reading of most MSS. of Usuard.

It may be added that Dioclecian is the usual spelling of the Martiloge (Dec. 24 and elsewhere), but that A. always uses the form Dioclicianus.

calendars bound up with it are certainly of that use, with the slight exception that the second calendar, which contains the obits, has the Deposition of St. Erkenwald on April 30, and his Translation on November 14 (the observance of which two feasts was allowed by Bishop Clifford). There are also the three feasts of St. Bridget, viz., her Natalis on July 23, her Translation on May 28, and her Canonization on October 7, and also (in a later hand) St. Catherine of Sweden on June 25. In the Martyrology of A. the dedication of the church of Salisbury is noticed on September 30, and that of St. Paul's, London, on October 1.

But before accepting this Syon Martyrologium as after the use of Sarum, it is further desirable to compare it with other Martyrologies, which may be supposed to be of the same use. Unfortunately we have no knowledge of the original Martyrologium of the cathedral church of Salisbury, beyond a few extracts made by John Leland<sup>1</sup> when he saw the book in the sixteenth century, and these extracts are taken exclusively from the Obituarium. There is, however, a Martyrology contained in a MS. Breviarium ad usum Sarum of the fifteenth century (British Museum, Harl. MS., 2785), which may be supposed to be of Sarum use. This has been partly collated in the Notes (where it is referred to as H), and it will be found that it varies considerably from the Syon version, and is, in particular, remarkable for the long notice of St. Oswald on Feb. 28.

Another Martyrology in the British Museum (Roy. MS., 2 A. xiii) has on the verso of its last leaf a list of festa duplia and festa maiora duplia in ecclesia Sarum, and it may be inferred that the book was intended for use in connection with Sarum rites. But in this MS. the notices of English saints differ from those in the Harleian and Syon MSS.

The Canterbury Martyrologium again, from which the extracts relating to English saints are printed in the Appendix to this volume, confines its notices of English saints in greater part to the Archbishops of Canterbury and Kentish saints, and, as might have been expected, the notices of St. Thomas on the feasts of his martyrdom and his translation are unusually full. There is also a commemoration, probably peculiar to Canterbury, of the return of St. Thomas to Canterbury after his exile (Dec. 2).

Whilst these books differ amongst themselves in the notices of English saints, they all agree, in common with most mediæval Martyrologies of the Western Church, in having for their basis the Martyrology compiled in the ninth century by Usuard, a monk of Paris. From the materials consulted we cannot determine that the Martyrologie of a church following Sarum use was required to be anything more than a variant of Usuard, with additions of English saints selected according to local circumstances.

The Syon Martyrologium is of this class. It closely follows a rather corrupt text of Usuard, and has numerous variations and additions. Its most remarkable peculiarity is the long notice of St. Mary of Egypt on April 2, and the four feasts of St. Edward, King and Martyr, viz., on Feb. 13, Feb. 18, March 18, and June 20. Nearly all English calendars and Martyrologies record the martyrdom of St. Edward on March 18, and his translation on June 20; but the Syon book not only has these, but two additional celebrations, on Feb. 18, of the receiving (Adventus) of the Martyr's body at Shaftesbury from Wareham, and a translation on Feb. 13.

These notices are such as we should expect to find in a Martyrologium for the use of Shaftesbury, where the body of St. Edward, King and Martyr, was shrined in great honour. The Shaftesbury character of the book is confirmed by the notices of St. Elgiva, whose name appears on May 18 as Eluina in A, and in the blundered form "Elene" in the Martiloge; and on Dec. 21, where again we have Eluina in A, but "Ewyne" in the Martiloge. At the same time, as Shaftesbury is only twenty miles from Salisbury, it is just possible that these notices might have been inserted in a Salisbury Martyrology.<sup>1</sup>

The Addicyons.—We have seen that the Martiloge proper is a translation of the Martyrologium which was read daily in capitulo. The translator has, however, supplied his readers with “addicyons” which have no liturgical authority of any kind. The names of saints given by him are in many cases not found in other Martyrologies or accredited Calendars, but are gathered, as we are told in his Preface, from the Legenda Aurea of Jacobus de Voragine, the Catalogus Sanctorum of Petrus de Natalibus, and other sources, including the Sanctiloge, which we might be inclined to identify with the Sanctilogium of John of Tinmouth, of which a copy exists in the British Museum. (Cottonian MS., Tiberius, E. 1.) But fortunately the Catalogue of the Library of the Brothers of Syon Monastery is preserved amongst the MS. treasures in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, and we are thus enabled to see what books Richard Whytford was able to consult.

The books are all entered with the names of their donors,<sup>1</sup> press-marks, titles, and the first words of their second folio for the purpose of identification. The two volumes of which the Sanctilogium consisted are thus entered :—

DUCISSA CLARENCE.      M. 1.

Prima pars Sanctilogii Saluatoris de legenda et historiis sanctorum continens libros 8. cum tabula de nominibus sanctorum infra contentorum et calendario generali secundum ordinem martilogii in principio libri.

DUCISSA CLARENCE.      M. 2.

Secunda pars Sanctilogii Saluatoris continens libros septem residuos predictorum.

<sup>1</sup> Among the names of the donors we find many times “Whytforde” who was perhaps the wealthy uncle of our Richard Whytford, also “Wynkyn,” i.e., Wynkyn de Worde, who presented copies of his Ortus Vocabulorum and Nova legenda Anglie, but his Martiloge does not appear in the Catalogue.

The name of the subsequent destroyer of the peace of Syon is also recorded amongst the donors :—

REX HENRICUS OCTAUUS.

O. 23.

2° fo. dicamus ut

Assertio septem sacramentorum aduersus Martinum Lutherum edita ab illustrissimo Rege nostro henrico. eius nominis octauo.

For the opportunity of examining this most interesting record I am indebted to the courtesy of the Rev. J. R. Harmer.

Thus we see that the Sanctilogium Saluatoris would have supplied suitable material for the “addicyons,” and as there does not appear to have been a copy of the Sanctilogium of John of Tinmouth in the Syon Library, we can hardly be wrong in supposing that it was the former of these books which Richard Whytford made use of, and referred to as the Sanctiloge.

All the other books which are referred to in the Preface as having been used for the Addicyons are also found in this Catalogue (see Notes, p. 206).

When we begin to study the “Addicyons” it will be found that they have been put together in a somewhat careless and unsystematic manner. There is comparatively little in them which is specially English. A very large proportion of the matter has been obtained from the Catalogus Sanctorum. In the month of January no less than fifty-two saints out of a total of ninety-two have been taken from this book.

The saints drawn from other sources are mostly British worthies, or hermits of the desert, and in making his selection the translator seems to have been generally guided by his love of the marvellous. The wild extravagance of the legends which he relates in the “Addicyons” stands out in contrast to the comparative soberness of the Martyrology proper.<sup>1</sup>

As examples of want of care, we find certain saints not only mentioned in the Martiloge on the proper day of their celebration, but also given again in the “addicyons” either on the same day or on a day or two before or after. For example, <sup>1</sup> The earliest Martyrologies, such as the Hieronymian, contains only the name, place, and day of the passion of the martyrs. The Martyrology of Bede has short histories added to the names, and this process was extended by Ado, archbishop of Vienne, who filled up many days left vacant by Bede. Then Usuard, a monk of Paris, towards the end of the ninth century condensed the work of Ado, and produced his Martyrology, which has been the basis of the Syon, as well as of most Western Martyrologies. For further information see Art. “Martyrology” in Smith and Cheetham’s Dictionary of Christian Antiquities, 1880, ii. p. 1132; and also the learned dissertations of Baronius in his edition of Martyrologium Romanum, Romæ, 1586; of Florentinius in his Vetus Occidentalis Ecclesiæ Martyrologium, Lucæ, 1668; and of Sollerius in the Bollandist Acta Sanctorum, Junii, tom. vi.

“Grymbald” of “wynchester,” in July 7, Add., is the same as “Grübald” of “wentane” on July 8; and on this latter day St. Kilian of Wurzburg is mentioned no less than three times, viz., as Ciliane and Kyliane in the Martiloge proper, and again as Ciliane in the “addicyons.” So, too, his companions are mentioned first as Colonare and Conace, and reappear in the “addicyons” as Colôname and Romane.

Mistakes of other kinds are not uncommon. Thus, on May 7, we find the early church of Queen Bertha described as “saynt Martyns in london”; and on November 12 we read of “Salomon and his sone Ieroboam.”

We may also notice that some of the saints in the “Addicyons,” such as “saynt Rowlande” and “saynt Olyuer” on June 16, and the story of Amilius and his Amicus on October 4, belong rather to the regions of romance than to hagiology; though it must be acknowledged that they are also to be found in the Catalogus Sanctorum.

The British Saints in the Martiloge. To facilitate comparison with other English Martyrologies it may be useful to give according to the order of the calendar a list of the British Saints in the Martiloge, distinguishing by italics those which occur only in the Addicyons.

The greater number of the saints contained in the above lists (excluding those in the "addiccyons") are found in early English Calendars. For instance, if a comparison is made with "the Red Book of Derby" (MS. C.C.C.C., No. 422), it will be seen that out of fifty-four English saints in its Calendar,<sup>1</sup> no less than fifty-two are also in the Martiloge. They are also to be found in the treatise De Sanctis qui in Anglica patria requiescent, of which there are several variants in Latin and also in Anglo-Saxon.<sup>2</sup>

Richard Whytford. Of Richard Whytford, as the translator of the Martiloge and compiler of the "addiccyons," it may be well to say a few words. According to Wood's Athenæ Oxonienses (Ed. Bliss, 1813, pp. 132-4) he was educated at Oxford, and afterwards became chaplain of Richard Foxe, Bishop of Winchester in the time of Henry VII. He is said to have been acquainted with Sir Thomas More,<sup>3</sup> and also with Erasmus,<sup>4</sup> but the only expression in the Martiloge which at all implies any sympathy with the opinions of the latter is the marginal note on April 21 (Add.), appended to the account of Ulphilas ('Gulphyle') :—“Note here how dilygent holy faders were to trāslate holy scripture ī to the moder tōgue and cōmune language.”

<sup>4</sup> Cf. Desiderii Erasmi Opera Omnia, Lugd. Batavorum, folio, 1703, vol. III. p. 7, where there is a letter which appears by the Index to this work to have been addressed to Richard Whytford, but we have no certainty that this is our Richard. He is addressed as "Ricarde candidissime . . . . cura ut bene valeas, teque tua philosophia oblectes."

Richard Whytford afterwards became a brother in the Brigettine monastery of Syon in Middlesex, of which an uncle of the same name, who died in 1511, had previously been a brother. The elder Richard Whytford was a wealthy clerk possessed of lands at Hope, Whitford, and elsewhere, both in Cheshire and also in Lancashire. The numerous presents of books which stand in the name of Whytford in the Catalogue of the Syon Library probably came from him.

Our Richard Whytford, the younger, was the author or translator of many books, written whilst he was a brother of Syon. A list of them is given by Bliss in his edition of Wood's Athenæ Oxonienses. The best known are a translation of the Rule of St. Augustine, The Martiloge, printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1526, The Pype or Tonne of the lyfe of Perfection, printed by Robert Redman in 1532; and a translation of Imitatio Christi, entitled The Folowinge of Christe, which was printed in 1556 and again in 1585.<sup>1</sup>

In the Martiloge, as well as in other of his books, Richard Whytford signs himself in self-depreciation as “the wretche of Syon,” and in The Pype or Tonne of the Lyfe of Perfection as “the olde wretched brother of Syon.” He evidently took for his model the saint whom he describes as “a man of grete notable mekenes, so that whan a rude persone in dyspleasure called hym wretche, he lowly thanked hym” (p. 150. Cf. also p. 158).

During the troubrous times of the visitation of Syon Monastery by the Commissioners of Henry VIII., Richard Whytford is several times referred to as having incurred the displeasure of these unscrupulous visitors. In one of Thomas Bedyll's letters to Secretary Cromwell, dated Aug. 28, 1534, there is a passage recounting that "on Sunday last, one Whytford, one of the most wilful of that house, preached, and wold speke no word of the Kinges Grace said title [supreme Hed of the Churche of England]; and this man hath but small lernyng, but is a greate rayler."<sup>1</sup>

At the suppression of Syon Monastery in 1539, Richard Whytford received a pension of eight pounds per annum,<sup>2</sup> and is said to have lived in retirement with William Blount, Lord Montjoy.<sup>3</sup> There is some uncertainty as to the exact date of his death. In the copy of The Pype or Tonne of the lyfe of Perfection preserved in the Library of Lambeth Palace (xxviii. 1. 6), on the verso of the first leaf, below the name of "The olde wretched brother of Syon/ Richarde Whytford," a sixteenth century hand has written, "obijt año dñi 1542°."

Richard Whytford as a translator. We have just read the opinion of Thomas Bedyll concerning Richard Whytford that he was a man of "small lernyng." Unfortunately, his work as a translator does not enable us to disprove this statement. Even after making allowance for the standard of scholarship at the beginning of the sixteenth century, we are unable to regard the learning of Richard Whytford as anything but "small." We may at once concede that he did not attempt close accuracy, but was satisfied if he could convey the general sense to his readers. Thus, he perhaps considered himself justified in rendering "cameli" by "mules" on Feb. 27, but it is not quite so easy to excuse him when he translates "in portu Romæ" by "in a gate of Rome" (Aug. 22, 23; Sept. 5), or "via Claudia" by "the village of clawde." On July 5, "que dum ad confessionem beati petri apostoli oraret" is turned into "bycause she praysed the vertue of saynt Peter," and the mistake is repeated on the following day.

Again, his knowledge of geography could not have been extensive when we find him turning the river Tiber into "the cite of tyberyng" (March 24).

Our translator often gets himself into difficulties by his fondness for offering explanations of words unfamiliar to himself and to his readers. Thus he is certainly very wide of the mark when he explains the torture known as "equuleus" as "an huge instrument of metall made lyke a hors/ all full of pryckes and hote as fyre" (Feb. 6); and the "olympiades" as "a notable date amonge the iewes" (Dec. 25).

We may also notice that when he is in difficulty as to the translation of certain forms of torture, he cuts the matter short by the convenient phrase, "many variaunt and cruell turmentes" (Dec. 30, and elsewhere). On the other hand, he frequently adds expressions to the text with a view to increasing the piquancy of his narrative. Thus, on Feb. 1, "leones" becomes with him "wode and rampyne lyons." And in order to round off his sentences, descriptive phrases not found in the original are often added, such as, "that was a pyteous man and of hygh perfeccyon" (Jan. 2), "of synguler vertue and holynes" (Apr. 19), "wt grete solempnite and moche Ioyfull honour" (March 31).

When we come to the proper names, there are many errors caused by mistakes which easily occur in reading a mediæval MS. Thus, f was read as a long s, giving us Sawster for Fawster (Feb. 6), and Sawstyne for Fawstyne (May 22), and iu was read as ni, giving "Nidoke" for "Judoke" (Jan. 9). Some mistakes of this kind had already occurred in the Latin original, and they must not all be laid upon Richard Whytford.

In treating the Latin names of persons, the translator has not been very successful in finding satisfactory equivalents in English. Thus with him "Lucy" does duty for Lucius (Dec. 3), and for Lucia (Sept. 16); so too Victor is used not only as a masculine but also for the female Victoria (Dec. 23). Occasionally we are glad to welcome the colloquial names of the sixteenth century, such as Agas for Agatha, Audry for Etheldreda, Alborowe for Ethelburga, Pernell for Petronilla, Benet for Benedict, Effam for Euphemia, Rewle for Regulus.

But the names of places were a greater stumbling block to Richard Whytford than the names of persons. Such names as Sicilia and Cilicia, Phrygia and Frisia, Sirmium and Smyrma, are continually interchanged.

For most of the Latin names of places he was unable to give any English equivalent, but contented himself with the original word, not always changing the oblique case of the word, or the adjectival forms used in Latin for describing the see of a bishop. Thus we have such words as "trecas" for Troyes (Trecæ), "calcidy" for Chalcis, "assisour" for Assisii, "pictauis" for Poitiers, "ephesum" for Ephesus (July 27), "arelatens" for Arles, "atrebacens" for Arras, "tolosane" for Toulouse, and "ratisponens" for Ratisbon.

Among the names of foreign places we have the vernacular English for a few of them, such as Parys, Rone (Rouen), Reme (Rheims), Orlyaunce, Naples, and a few others; and occasionally a familiar English name is made to serve for several distinct Latin ones. Thus, "Oxford" not only represents Oxonium (Dec. 21), but also Oximæ, Exmes in Normandy, on Dec. 29, and Oxona, Burgo de Osma in Spain, on Apr. 2. So too "Venyse" does duty not only for Venetia but also for Venusia, Venosa (Oct. 24); and even "englonde" stands not only for Britannia, but also for Britannia Minor (Brittany), as in the "addicyons" on Oct. 24.

The names of places in England seem to have presented no less difficulty than the foreign ones. Even "Wentana civitas" is left as "wentane," although Syon was only separated from the diocese of Winchester by the river Thames; and Dorobernia remains as "doroberne," except on Nov. 10, where "dorobernensis" is confused with "Eboracensis," and St. Just is made "archebysshop of yorke."

The Martyrologium of Syon Monastery (British Museum, Add. MS. 22285). The history of this book is so closely connected with the fortunes of the “daughters of Syon,” that a few words must be said about the monastery itself.<sup>1</sup>

The monastery of St. Saviour and SS. Mary the Virgin and Bridget of Syon was founded in Middlesex by King Henry V. in 1415, and was the only Brigettine house in England. Like other monasteries of this Order it was a double foundation for Sisters and Brothers, each with a separate enclosure. It was suppressed by Henry VIII. in 1539, when many of the Sisters retired to the Continent, and continued to live together according to the rule of their Order. By Queen Mary the daughters of Syon were restored to their old home in 1559, but they were dispossessed by Queen Elizabeth, when they took refuge a second time on the Continent, and resided successively at Dermond, Antwerp, and Mechlin. They removed to Rouen in 1584, but after the surrender of that city to Henry of Navarre, they again took flight and reached Lisbon in 1594, where they received a gift of houses and grounds from Isabel de Azevedo, and built a church and monastery. Here they remained until 1809, when troubles on the Continent urged them to take refuge in England, and nine sisters returned, bringing with them some books, their seals, and other relics. They at first lived in a small house at Walworth, and then at Peckham and elsewhere. Subsequently they removed to Spetisbury in Dorsetshire, and they are now settled at Chudleigh near Newton Abbot in Devonshire.

The MS. Martyrologium which had been the companion of the Sisters in all their wanderings was brought back to England in 1809, and sold to the Earl of Shrewsbury, from whose executors it was acquired for the British Museum in 1858.

Although this MS. has certainly been in the hands of the Sisters since the suppression of the monastery of Syon, in 1539, there is reason to suppose that the volume originally belonged to the Brothers. We know for certain that there were two <sup>1</sup> A full and interesting account of Syon Monastery at Isleworth will be found in Aungier's History and Antiquities of Syon Monastery, London, 1840.

Martyrologia at Syon, one for the use of the Sisters, the other for the Brothers. They are referred to at fo. 17 b. of the MS. we are about to describe, in the chapter "De exequiis pro benefactoribus librariarum," where it is ordered that the name of Thomas Graunte, a donor of books, is to be inscribed in each of the two Martyrologia. "Concessum est eciam quod nomen dicti Magistri Thome inseretur et inscribetur utrisque martyrogiis scilicet tam sororum quam fratrum."

The reason for concluding that we have left to us the original Martyrologium of the Brothers is that the book contains the form of profession of the clerical Brothers whether sacerdotes or diaconi, and also for the lay-brothers (focarii), but there is no corresponding form for the Sisters. It will also be observed that the directions for the services for deceased members of the house and for benefactors would concern the Brothers rather than the Sisters.

We now proceed to describe the MS., which fortunately retains its fifteenth-century binding of white leather with overlapping edges. The clasp still remains. The leaves, which are of coarse vellum, measure 10 $\frac{1}{2}$  inches by 7 inches.

The figures in the following description of the contents refer to the modern numbering of the leaves.

Fo. 1. Pasted into the cover there is a memorandum on paper relating to the death of St. Bridget in 1373, and the translation of her relics to the monastery of Wastein in Sweden in 1391. Fo. 77 a-188 a. Incipit martyrologium: per anni circulum.

This is the Martyrology which Richard Whytford has translated. The original text has received many additions and corrections. In some cases the correction has been written on a slip of paper and pasted in, and in other cases the erasure of the former writing has been so complete that it is not possible to determine the original reading.

In the upper and lower margins have been added in a later hand short passages to be read in capitulo, e.g. :—

Jan. 1. In clericis tonsura quoddam signum est quod in corpore signatur. sed in animo agitur: scilicet ut hoc signo in religione vicia resecentur: et criminibus carnis nostre quasi crinibus exuamur: atque inde renouatis sensibus ut comis rudibus enitescamus. expoliantes nos: iuxta apostolum veterem hominem cum actibus suis. et induentes nouum hominem qui renouatur in agnitione dei. Tu autem domine miserere nostri. Deo gratias.

Mar. 1. Tam doctrina quam vita: clarere debet ecclesiasticus doctor. Nam doctrina sine vita arrogantem reddit: vita sine doctrina inutilem facit.

The course of the Martyrology is interrupted at fo. 94, 95 by two leaves containing the Preces in capitulo, which are evidently placed here as being almost exactly in the middle of the book.

At the end of the Martyrologium on fo. 188:—Absolucion ffratum die Canonizacionis beate Birgitte.

Auctoritate eciam patris omnipotentis et domini nostri ihesu christi. et beatorum petri et pauli apostolorum. et auctoritate michi in hac parte indulta. ego concedo tibi persistenti in sinceritate fidei catholice. unitate sancte romane ecclesie. ac obediencia et deuocione romani pontificis plenam remissionem omnium peccatorum tuorum de quibus corde contritus es et ore confessus. The reading of the Martyrologium in capitulo. It has been already mentioned that the Martyrologium was read in cathedral and monastic churches, where Sarum use was followed, at the conclusion of prime, when the clergy went in procession to the Chapter House.<sup>2</sup> At Syon the usual custom was not literally followed, for on fo. 13 of A, we have the direction “Martilogium legatur post de profundis.” This service known as De Profundis was peculiar to the Brigittine rule, and consisted of a recitation of the Psalm De Profundis followed by a collect at a grave kept always open. This service, according to cap. xxiv of the rule of St. Saviour, was to be said after tierce,<sup>3</sup> and consequently the

Martyrology at Syon could not have been read at the end of prime as it was elsewhere.

The printed Sarum Breviaries, which were intended for use in parish churches, take no direct notice of the reading of the Martyrologium and the service in capitulo. Reference is made to it incidentally in the rubrics in Commemoratione Defunctorum (Breviarum ad usum Sarum, ed. Procter and Wordsworth, III. 986), and also in the rubrics relating to prime for Maundy Thursday and Good Friday (Ib. I. dcclxxxiv, dccciv).<sup>1</sup> There are similar incidental allusions to the reading of the Martyrology in the York Breviary (ed. Lawley, vol. i. 287, 406; vol. ii. 667).

In the Hereford Breviary, as I am informed by the Rev. W. Howard Frere, the reading of the Martyrology is referred to at the end of prime:—“Lecto Martilogio sequitur V. Preciosa.” But the expression “ubi vero martilogium non habetur” implies that the reading of it was not universally enforced.

The following account of the service in capitulo at the end of prime is extracted from a MS. “Portiforium ad usum Sarum,” of the fifteenth century in the possession of the writer of this Introduction.<sup>2</sup> The book was written for use in the diocese of Norwich, as is shown by the entry in the Calendar on Sept. 24. “Dedicacio ecclesie cathedralis Norwicensis. ix lecciones.”

His dictis eant processionaliter clericci in capitulum, et sit ibi quidam de prima forma scilicet puer indutus superpellico paratus ad legendum lectionem de martilogio absque Iube domine sed pronunciando primo numerum nonarum. Iduum uel calendarum, et etatem lune quales erunt in crastino secundum quod dies uidebitur exigere et finiatur leccio sine. Tu autem. hoc modo. Et aliorum plurimorum sanctorum martirum confessorum atque uirginum.

<sup>1</sup> A MS. Sarum Portiforium in my possession, which appears to have belonged to the parish of Shillington, Beds., has a rubric in the Sanctorale before the feast of St. Matthias giving directions for the reading of the Martiloge in leap year which are almost identical with the extract from an Ordinale printed in the Notes of this volume, p. 212.

<sup>2</sup> Mr. Christopher Wordsworth has called my attention to a rubric in the printed Sarum Antiphoner of 1520, which is similar to that of the MS. Portiforium.

Description of "The Martiloge in englysshe after the vse of the chirche of salisbury/ ¶ as it is redde in Syon/ with addicyons."
Printed at London by Wynkyn de Worde, Feb. 15, 1526.

The book is a small quarto consisting of 144 leaves. The first two leaves are unnumbered and without signature, the former of them having a woodcut of St. Bridget, with the title above it, whilst the other leaf has the preface in larger type than the rest of the book.

The numbered leaves are in 35 gatherings of 4 each (except the last, kk, which has 6), with signatures a-z, ¶, c, aa-kk.

There are a few mistakes in the numbering of the leaves, fo.

xcviii, c, and cxli are wrongly numbered xcvi, xcix, and cxxxix, respectively. The last leaf is unnumbered.

The pages are of 32 lines, and the printed page measures 152 mm. by 97 mm. (excluding the head lines). The preface is in larger type, 29 lines to the page, and the size of the printed page is 160 mm. by 95 mm.

The woodcut of St. Bridget on the first leaf (see the facsimile) represents her seated at a desk writing her revelations at the dictation of an angel. Above there is a representation of the Holy Trinity and of the Nativity. Below her kneel a brother and a sister of the order founded by her. Behind her are placed the staff and scrip as symbols of her pilgrimage to Rome; and the crown and arms mark her rank as Princess of Nericia in the kingdom of Sweden.

This woodcut, of which a facsimile is given in this reprint, was used not only by Wynkyn de Worde, but also in same year (1526) by R. Pynson (three times in the same book) for the Pilgrimage of Perfection. It was also used by Richard Fawkes in his edition of The Myroure of oure Ladye, 1530, and by Robert Redman in The Pype/ or Tonne/ of the lyfe of Perfection, 1532, and elsewhere.

The copies of this book which have come under our notice are the following:—

1. BRITISH MUSEUM. [C. 25. c. (4)] A fine and perfect copy.
2. BODLEIAN LIBRARY, OXFORD. [Douce Ww. 113.] A perfect copy.
3. LAMBETH LIBRARY. [xxxv. 2. 7.] This copy wants the first two leaves, but is interesting as being in its original binding of stamped leather. On one side are panels with figures of SS. George, Barbara, Michael and Catharine, and on the other the arms and supporters of Henry VIII, with the legend:—laudate dominum de terra dracones et omnes abyssi. G.R.
4. CATHEDRAL LIBRARY, LINCOLN. [Rr. 4. 26.] This copy wants the last leaf.
5. HUTH LIBRARY. See Catalogue of the Huth Library, vol. iii, p. 924. A perfect copy.

6. STONYHURST COLLEGE. See F. H. Dickinson's List of Service Books, 1850, p. 15.
7. ARCHBISHOP MARSH'S LIBRARY, DUBLIN. To the Rev. Christopher Wordsworth we are indebted for knowledge of this copy.
(Information as to the existence of other copies will be welcome.)

The present reprint. In reprinting the Martiloge, an endeavour has been made to reproduce as closely as possible the peculiarities of the old print, and with this object the contractions have not been expanded. No alteration has been consciously made even in the punctuation, except in a few cases, where in the original print a full stop was left out at the end of a line from want of space, although the next line commenced with a capital letter. As the present print does not reproduce the old one line for line, and the break no longer comes at the end of a line, the stop has usually been supplied. In order to save space the marginal notes have been indented into the text of the reprint. The use of Roman type instead of the black letter of Wynkyn de Worde has of course entirely changed the typography of the book. In some few cases a difficulty has occurred in finding exact equivalents for the marks of contraction in the original. It will be noticed that occasionally the marks of contraction are not used in the conventional manner. In these matters the original has been strictly followed. The contractions in the old print were often determined by the desire of the compositor to compress his matter into one line. Consequently, in our reprint the contractions appear to be used capriciously, as the reason for their use is not apparent without consulting the original text.

The number of typographical errors in Wynkyn de Worde's print does not appear to be large. They have not been corrected in the reprint, but have been marked with an obelus (†) to assure the reader that the text has been reproduced, and that the mistake has not been made in the process of reprinting.

The same mark has also been placed against some of the proper names, which differ in their spelling from that used in other Martyrologies, and in such cases the word is generally referred to in the Notes. In the use of capitals for the proper names, the old printer has been very irregular. Usually his names of persons have capitals, but the names of places begin with small letters. It will, however, be noticed that at the commencement of the book many of the names of places have capitals. When the names of persons begin with s, the want of a capital s in his fount has compelled Wynkyn de Worde to use a small letter. A small initial w is also often used, and the capital w which sometimes occurs is in reality only a small w belonging to a larger fount.

The book has been reprinted from a transcript made by the Rev. F. Procter from the copy preserved in the Cathedral Library at Lincoln, which was lent for the purpose by the Dean and Chapter. The proofs have been read by Mr. Procter, and compared with this copy; and they have also been compared by his co-editor with the copy of the same edition in the British Museum.

The Editors desire to express their thanks to many who have helped in the production of this book. In the first place, thanks are due to the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln for placing their copy of the Martiloge at the disposal of Mr. Procter for making a transcript, and for the subsequent correction of the proofs. Acknowledgments are also due for facilities and courteous assistance afforded at the British Museum, and in the Library of Lambeth Palace. From several members of the Council of the Henry Bradshaw Society, much help has been received in elucidating obscure and difficult matters. The Rev. Canon Cooke (Chairman), Dr. J. Wickham Legg, Rev. F. E. Warren, Mr. W. H. St. John Hope, have contributed from their stores of knowledge; and especial thanks are due to the Rev. Christopher Wordsworth, Prebendary of Lincoln, who has taken the greatest interest in this work. To him the Society is indebted for the Index Sanctorum which he has compiled, and also for his kindness in reading the proofs of all the sheets as they appeared, and for many valuable suggestions with which he has enriched the edition.

In conclusion, it should be added that although Mr. Procter has kindly read the proofs of the Notes, Indexes, and Introduction, he is not responsible for the opinions expressed in them, nor for the many errors which it is feared may be found.

* * The principal aim of the following notes is to show the variations of Richard Whyford's English version from the MS. Syon Martyrologium (A). No complete collation with other MSS. and editions has been attempted. Some variants are given to illustrate the irregularities of mediæval martyrologies, whilst others will enable the reader to judge whether the errors which occur should be charged to the translator or his original. Aberd. C. and D. have only been referred to for the Scottish and Irish Saints.

p. 1. l. 32. The addicyons for theyr more edificacyon/ we gadered out of the sanctiloge/ legendaurea/ catalogo sanctorum/ the cronycles of Antonine/ and of saynt Vincent. The Sanctiloge is probably not the Sanctilogium Britannicum of John of Tinmouth, of which a MS. may be seen in the British Museum (Cottonian MS. Tiberius, E. 1); but is more likely to be the Sanctilogium Salvatoris of which a copy in two volumes had been presented to Syon Monastery by the Duchess of Clarence. This gift is recorded in a valuable MS. now preserved in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, which gives a catalogue of the Library of Syon Monastery (fo. 43. b).

The legendaurea or Legenda Aurea is a name commonly given to the Legenda Sanctorum compiled by Jacobus de Voragine, O.S.D., archbishop of Genoa (1292-1298). Its immense popularity is attested by the number of editions which issued from the continental presses at the close of the fifteenth and beginning of the sixteenth centuries. It was translated into most European languages with local additions. Of these vernacular versions one of the most interesting is the Golden Legende which was printed by Caxton about 1484, and afterwards by Wynkyn de Worde and Julian Notary. There were at least six copies of the Legenda Aurea in the Library of Syon.

The Catalogus Sanctorum compiled by Petrus de Natalibus, bishop of Equilio (1370-1400), had a popularity almost equalling that of the last mentioned work, and many editions issued from the early presses of Lyons and elsewhere. Syon Monastery possessed a copy.

The cronicles of Antonine and of saynt Vincent apparently refer to the Liber Cronicarum or Historiale of St. Antonino, archbishop of Florence (1448-1459), and to the Speculum Historiale of Vincentius, all of which are found in the Syon catalogue.

H has : Apud monasterium beati petri quod nuncupatur pirumpe depositio benedicti abbatis. St. Benedict was the founder of St. Peter's, Wearmouth. Pirumpe appears elsewhere under the forms Piremuthe, and Wirimunda, which are disguises of the familiar Wearmouth. The Anglo-Saxon W (ƿ) and the thorn letter (þ) are often mistaken for P by later transcribers. In this way Wareham has been transformed into Perham on Feb. 18 (p. 23).

(Letters relating to the Suppression of Monasteries, Camden Society, p. 227.) The MS. English Prymer at St. John's College, Cambridge (ed. by H. Littlehales, 1891) has on Feb. 5, "seynt agace." But Caxton's Golden Legend, Marshall's Goodly Prymer, 1535, and The Prymer in Englyshe, 1538, have "agathe." In the following century the English version of the Roman Martyrologe, S. Omers, 1667, has "Agatha." In the case of proper names we often see this return to the original Latin. Thus Ponce Pilate of our early creeds has gone back to Pontius Pilate.

- March 18. l. 1. The feest of saynt Edward. This long account of St. Edward is perhaps, like that on Feb. 13, peculiar to the Syon Martyrology.
The Latin version is as follows: In prouincia occidentalium saxonum: passio sancti edwardi regis et martiris anglorum. et eximii testis dei: qui christianissimo fundatori monasteriorum edgaro pia proles successit in regno. Quem in primeuo pubescentem. et pubertatis flore regnante: grauissima fastidientis nouerce. et principum gentis sue persecucio. serenissimum martirem christo confecerat: et beatorum collegio in celis coniunxerat. Qui quam magnificus fulget in astris: ad tumbam ipsius demonstrat nunc operata causa salutis. A. (H. merely has at the end of the day: Eodem die sancti edwardi martiris.)
- March 19. l. 5. At suretyke. apud sureticum A. surrentum H. Sorrento.
- l. 6. Marcyll. marcelli. A. Marci. R. U.
- l. 7. Colotery. caloceri. A. H. U.
- l. 11. Florence. A. and H. omit.
- March 22. l. 1. At septimane in byterne. Apud septimaniam in biter- nis. A. biteris. H. Biterris. U.
- l. 2. Affrodose. Affrosii A. following U. Ado om. At end A. adds in a later hand: In affrica: sancti saturnini et aliorum nouem.
- March 23. l. 3. Victor byssishop of africane. Victor africanus episco- pus. A.
- March 24. l. 8. In the cite of tyberym. a quo ipse postea in tyberim pro fide christi necatus est. A. The transformation of the river Tiber into a city is noteworthy.
- l. 10. At syre y<sup>e</sup> feest of saynt Agapite. Apud siriam: sancti seleuci. In frigia: sancti agapiti confessoris. A. Here two clauses have been made into one by the omission of the end of the former, and the beginning of the latter. A similar case will be found on June 10.

- At end A. adds in a later hand: In Suecia natale sancte Catherine virginis diue matris Birgitte filie.
- Add. l. 15. Mackartyne. Meic Cairthinn D.
- March 25. l. 12. At sirtyne. In sirinio. A. H. Apud Sirmium. Ado. Sirmii. R. Sirmium in Illyricum.

- April 2. l. 7. Nicesy. nicesii. A. nicerii. H. Nicetii. U.
- l. 10. saynt Mary egypyake. The long account of this saint is in A. but is not in Usuard. H. briefly has: Apud palestinam depositio sancte marie egipciace que peccatrix appellatur.
- Add. l. 1. saynt Dydake bysshope of oxfordre. This anticipation of a see of Oxford is the result of confusing Oxomensis with Oxoniensis, the former being the adjective of Oxoma, Burgo de Osma, in the N. of Spain. Caxton's Golden Legende in the life of "Seynt Domynyk" cautiously gives us "the diocese of Oxonence." The translator of the Martiloge finds another use for "oxforde" on Dec. 29 (l. 7), where it represents Oximæ, Exmes in Normandy.
- April 4. l. 5. y' cursed arryens. The original Latin is not so strong: cuius studio inter cetera doctrine et miraculorum insignia. tempore arriane perfidie. tota ytalia ad catholicam fidem conuersa est. A.

- Add. l. 3. Resigned his rome and went to rome. Richard Whytford has here (perhaps unconsciously) lapsed into a pun and anticipated Shakespeare's play with the same word:—

"Now is it Rome indeed and room enough."

(Julius Cæsar, I, 2.)

A similar use of the word rome for an office has already occurred at Sept. 13 :—“Saynt Phylyp . . . a noble man and a captyayne of the cite/ which rome and all the worlde he forsoke for Chryst.”

Sept. 26. l. 8. At albane. Albanum, probably Albano near Rome, but according to Du Saussay (Mart. Gall. ii, 1173) a place bearing the same name near Narbonne.

- l. 12. The dedicacyon of the chirche of syon. A. over an erasure: Ipsa die festum canonisacionis sancte Birgitte. The Martiloge in English commemorates this canonization on Oct. 7, as do also the two calendars of A.
- On Oct. 20 the first calendar has: Festum Dedicacionis Ecclesie de Syon a° x<sup>i</sup> 1588 (in a later hand)—and the second calendar which has the notices of obits: Dedicacio monasterii de Syon. a° x<sup>i</sup> 1488.
- Oct. 22. l. 8. Mimilon. numilionis A. over an erasure. (originally: mimilonis?) Nunilonis U. R. Milonis. Ado (Add.).
- Oct. 23. l. 11. Elfede apparently St. Elfede, abbess of Romsey, noticed also on Oct. 29 Add.
- Oct. 24. l. 1. In napules at venyse. In venisia ciuitate apulie A. In Vesuvia civitate Apuliæ U. Venosa.
- Add. l. 1. In englonde the feest of saynt Maglour. Cf. Vita de sancti Maglorii secundi episcopi Dolensis in Britannia minori. (Surius, De Vitis Sanctorum, Venetiis 1581, tom. v. fo. 330.)

- l. 7. Brinstane. St. Birstan, bishop of Winchester, d. 934.
- Add. l. 2. orchester. Orchestria N.L.A.
 It is not easy to identify Orchester. The suggested substitution of Rochester is a mere guess.
- Nov. 5. l. 7. saynt Malachy, archbishop of Armagh, died at Clairvaux, on the nones of November (Cat. Sanct. x, 27), but according to some on Nov. 2, on which day he is noticed in the Addicyns of R. Whytford.
- Nov. 6. l. 6. In fryselonde. In frigia A. U.
- l. 6. Actike. attici A. U.
- Nov. 7. l. 6. At abbiens. apud albigensem urbem. A. (altered from abbigensem). U.

 "Leonium Sequanæ recolunt quoque littora sanctum."
 (D'Achery, Spicilegium, 1723, tom. ii, p. 55.)

Add. l. 2. of Salomon and of his sone Jeroboam. The compiler of the Addicyns is responsible for this relationship. The account of Ahijah (Ahias) is probably taken from Cat. Sanct. x. 51, where, however, we find : hieroboam seruus salomonis.

Nov. 13. l. 3. Demetry. demetrii A. Mitrii. Ado U. R.

Nov. 14. Add. l. 8. one of the xiij. petitioners. This expression is not found in Cat. Sanct. x. 61, from which the rest of the account of St. Veneranda is taken. It recalls the quatuordecim auxiliatores of Gernian hagiology, but St. Veneranda is not found in the enumeration of their names in Hortulus anime, Nurenberge, 1519, fo. cvii. b.

Nov. 16. l. 2. Ewthere. eucherii A. U.

Add. l. 9. At lucane y' feest of saynt Phridiane. Lucæ in Tuscia translatio sancti Frigidiani episcopi et confessoris. R. This is the Irish St. Finnian, known in Lucca as San Frediano.

Add. l. 11. the flode that was lyke to have drowned the cite. The subject of San Frediano turning the course of the river Serchio has been painted by Filippo Lippi and other Italian artists. See illustrations in Miss Stokes' Six months in the Apennines, 1892, pp. 41, 80.

Nov. 19. l. 4. Pociane. Ponciani A.

l. 5. At agens. Ciuitate astiagensi. A. U. Astiagis, now Ecija in Andalusia.

ib. Crispyne. Cipriani A. Crispini U. The Latin text (A.) is here in error. The translator must have had before him a text with the usual reading Crispini. St. Crispin is said to have been the first bishop of Ecija.

Add. l. 1. Elizabeth already mentioned in the previous line.

Nov. 20. l. 7. Syluere. siluestri. A. U. R.

l. 10. Solitary. solutoris. A. U. R.

- Nov. 30. l. 6. Trophiane. traiani A. troiani H. U. R.
- Dec. 1. l. 4. Numerary. numerario A. Numeriano U.
- Dec. 4. It is strange that a Martiloge claiming be "after the vse of the chirche of Salisbury" should omit St. Osmund. A. adds in a later hand: Item in anglia. depositio sancti osmundi episcopi sarisburyensis.
- On July 16 the Translation of St. Osmund has been similarly omitted in the Martiloge, although a later hand has added it to A.
- Dec. 5. l. 6. Niceny. nicecii A. H. U.
- Add. l. 6. saynt Iustiniane a bysshop & martyr. The story agrees in most particulars with that of St. Justinian, hermit of Ramsey Island, near St. Davids.
- Dec. 6. l. 9. Cercy. tercii A. H. U.
- Dec. 7. l. 3. The translator has here somewhat departed from his original: Qui cum militaris esset. et prohiberet quosdam volentes illudere mortuis cadaveribus martirum. A.
- l. 7. In the fraunchest of meldinens. In pago meldicensi. A. H. U.
- Dec. 8. l. 8. In the fraūchest of dymens in territorio dunensi. A. (H. om.). Diviniensi. U-Auct. Dijon.
- Dec. 9. l. 2. by Decius the presydent of spayne, a prefecto hispaniarum daciano. A. U.
- Dec. 10. l. 1. At hyspolitane the feest of saynt Capofory . . . .
Apud ciuitatem hispolitanam: sanctorum martirum carpopori presbiteri. et habundii diaconi. A. U.
- Dec. 11. l. 4. At beame. Ciuitate ambianis A. H. U. Amiens.
- l. 5. Fustinian. fustiani A. fusciani H. U.
- l. 6. iuce of herbes with tynegre & peper blowen in to theyr eares and nosethrylles. In horum naribus et auribus iussit iudex tarincas immitti. A. "Tarinæ, Sudes ferreae." (Du Cange, Glossarium Mediae et Infimae Latinitatis.)
- Dec. 12. l. 6. The translator has omitted—In alexandria: sanctorum martyrum epimachi et alexandri. A. U.
- Add. l. 1. Ewstrace. eustratius. Cat. Sanct. i, 61.
- l. 3. satale. satalia. Cat. Sanct. l. c.
- l. 6. auare. civitas auraricenorum. Cat. Sanct. l. c.
- l. 11. Fynany. Finnani. Aberd.

- Dec. 14. l. 5. vnto exyle. per metalla A. U.
- Dec. 15. l. 8. Maximyne. maximi A. H. maximini U.
- Dec. 16. l. 10. Vanały. naualis A. H. R.
- Dec. 18. l. 6. Canciane. graciani A. H. Gatiani U. R.
Add. l. 3. he ordeyned a feest of her to be kept in his chirche before Chrystmas. Reference is here made to Expectatio Beatae Mariæ, observed in Spain, Dec. 18. Cf. Cat. Sanct. i, 76.
- Dec. 20. l. 2. Iugenij. ingenii A. H. U.
l. 3. Theophyly. theophoti A. theophili H. U.
l. 5. In trace at gelduba. In tracia ciuitate gelduba. A. U. Du Saussay (Mart. Gall. ii, p. 1204) and others consider that Usuard has wrongly placed Gelduba in Thrace, and identify it with Geldub on the Rhine below Cöln.
- Dec. 21. l. 5. The feest also of saynt Ewyne a quene. Ipso die sancte eluine regine. A. (H. omits). On May 18th, Eluina ('Elene') appears to represent St. Elgiva of Shaftesbury.
- l. 6. In englonde within the fraüchest of oxford/ at betony the deposicyon af saynt Berenwald preest & martyr. In britannia territorio oxoniensi vico bentone : depositio sancti berenwaldi presbiteri et martiris. A. (H. omits). In Leland's Collectanea (Hearne's Ed. 1770) vol. III, p. 408, there is an extract "E. libello de Locis, quibus S. in Anglia requiescunt," in the course of which we find "S. Brenwaldus apud Bamptonam." Betony (Bentona) may therefore be probably identified with Bampton, Oxon. Nothing further seems to be known of Berenwald. For the reference to Leland we are indebted to Mr. James Parker of Oxford.
- Dec. 22. l. 2. xx. triginta A. U.
l. 4. Chiridon. chiridionis A. Ischyronis Ado. Chæremonis R.
l. 7. H. has : ciuitate hostia sanctorum demetrii honorati et flori. Ciuitate antiochia sancti basilii.
l. 8. Dewtrey. demetrii A. H. U.
l. 9. Theosie. theodosie A. (H. omits). U-Auct.
- Dec. 23. l. 13. after martyrs A. adds in a later hand : Parisius dedicacio basilice in honore sancte crucis et sancti vincencii.
l. 13. The deposicyon also of saynt Gyldebert a kyng. et depositio domini childeberti regis A.
- Dec. 24. l. 3. in the persecucion of the emperour Daciane. sub deciana persecucione A.
l. 6. Dioclestan. diocliciani et maximiani. A. U.
l. 7. specyally in his knees with botkyns. cardis ferreis in genibus percussus. A.
- Dec. 25. l. 8. a notable date amonge the iewes called olympiades. The attempt of the translator to explain the word olympiad is rather unfortunate.

Dec. 28. At end A. adds in a later hand—In affrica : sanctorum victoris. castoris. et rogaciani.

Dec. 29. l. 3. Trophyne. trophimi A. U.

l. 7. In the frauchest of oxford. In pago oximensi A. (over an erasure) U. oxiniensi H. Oximo or Oximæ, now Exmes in Normandy, the district round which is known as L'Exmesin.

It is strange to find the passion of St. Thomas of Canterbury omitted from a Martiloge which claims to be “after the vse of the chirche of Salysbury” and relegated to the Addicyns. The omission was probably accidental, for the octave of the festival is given in the usual place on Jan. 5. In A. the entry was carefully scraped out in the time of Henry VIII, but was reinserted apparently in the time of Queen Mary. It now runs:—Cantuarie passio sancti thome archiepiscopi et martiris. Qui ob defensionem libertatis ecclesiastice in cathedrali ecclesia gladio percussus migravit ad christum.

In H. there is a long eulogy of St. Thomas, which has escaped mutilation, although in the same book the word papa has always been carefully erased. The account is as follows:—

Item in britannia ciuitate cantuariensi/ passio beati thome archiepiscopi. qui cum pro libertate ecclesie dei fideliter decertaret/ diutinum exilium in cilicio uigiliis et ieuniis deuota mente sustinuit. Postmodum paciendi desiderio et amore ouium ad sedem propriam rediens non multum post quattuor militum armatorum temulenta inuasione cum fratres vespertinos ymños psallerent/ ceruicis et corone diminucione et cerebro cum ense extracto. hostiam deo in ecclesia placentem obtulit. sigris et uirtutibus clarus. (Cf. Appendix, p. 291.)

Dec. 30. l. 5. many varyaut & cruell turmentes. This is a condensed account of details given in A.

Add l. 1. Ewgyne. Egwin, bishop of Worcester, d. 717.

Add l. 6. bysshop of canens. episcopus cannensis, que ciuitas est apulie (Cat. Sanct. ii. 20).

Dec. 31. l. 7. Colubyne. columbe A. (corrected from columbine). H. U.

CHRISTOPHORO WORDSWORTH. A.M.
ORDINATVS.

* * In cases where the saints-names as given by Whytford are incorrectly or unusually written, it has been thought desirable to give cross-references to the more ordinary forms as they appear in the index to the "Vetus Romanum Martyrologium a Baronio desideratum." This, together with the Martyrology and Festivals of Ado bishop of Vienne, was provided with an index by Heribert Rosweyd, S.J., of Utrecht in the folio Martyrologium Romanum which issued from the Plantin press at Antwerp in 1613.

EXTRACTS RELATING TO ENGLISH SAINTS IN THE CANTERBURY MARTYROLOGY.

THE following extracts are from the Martyrologium of Christ Church, Canterbury (Brit. Mus. Arundel MS., 68). This MS. which appears to be of the end of the thirteenth century, contains also an Obituarium, an abstract of the Rule of St. Benedict, and other memoranda. About the beginning of the sixteenth century the book was apparently laid aside, and superseded by a beautiful copy made at that time, which is preserved in Lambeth Library (MS. No. 20). In the Arundel book the names of the pope and of St. Thomas of Canterbury have not been erased; but in the Lambeth copy, which was probably in daily use in the time of Henry VIII., the word papa has generally been erased and altered to episcopus and the name of St. Thomas has been erased, together with the notices of him in 7 July, 2 Dec., and 29 Dec.

The Lambeth copy follows the original so closely even in the punctuation that it is not considered necessary to give a collation, which would only show slight variations in spelling.

With the exception of the few entries relating to English Saints, the Canterbury Martyrology is that of Usuard, and varies from it far less than does the Syon Martyrology.

The additions later than the thirteenth century are printed in italics.

The letter U. has been placed after the entries relating to British saints which are found in Usuard.
